

CRITICAL ISSUES ALONG THE COMMUNITY COLLEGE TRANSFER PIPELINE: A CASE STUDY OF CALIFORNIA

The Charles Carpenter lecture series provides an opportunity for students, graduates and educational leaders to gather together to learn about current trends in community colleges and network with other professionals.

DANIEL G. SOLORZANO

Professor of Social Science and Comparative Education
UCLA Graduate School of Education and Information Studies

Join award-winning professor Daniel Solórzano as he discusses factors that help or hinder students of color as they make their way through California's community college system — and how his findings can be applied in Oregon and beyond.
